Myth vs. Reality:
10 Facts About Implementing Field Service Software

Myth	VS	Reality
It's too hard to transition to a field service software		Putting in the time upfront will save you admin time in the long run
The price is too high!		You can earn more & generate more business with software – learn more by using our paperless savings calculator!
I don't need training, I'm tech-savvy		Training with experts helps anyone adjust to sophisticated software with plenty of new features
It's too much effort to move my data		Having organised & secure information allows for fewer errors and less time spent handling data
I don't have time to train my team		Staff should be able to sit in on remote training with no extra costs
I don't have enough users to make use of it		You can benefit from an all-in-one software as long as you have office staff & engineers
I don't want to change it up on customers		Software gives you more opportunities to craft convenient customer experiences
My engineers will find that it's too hard to use		After learning the basics, they'll appreciate the efficiency of having job information at their fingertips
My current system is good enough		Keeping up with digitalisation is important to meet customer demands and compete with rival businesses
Setting up the integrations will be a pain		After setting up each integration once, you have everything in one digital place, which means less time spent hopping between browsers & papers
